

Quitting your job on a feeling is how a lot of businesses fail in year one.

The smartest founders don't jump.
They prepare.

BEFORE YOU LEAP

Going full-time isn't the first milestone.

Building a business that can support you is.

Most people celebrate the quit.
The milestone that matters is financial sustainability.

QUESTION 1

Do you have consistent revenue?

Can your business reliably generate income, or are you depending on a few good months?

QUESTION 2

Can you cover your personal expenses?

Know your runway before you make the leap. Have at least 6 months of breathing room.

QUESTION 3

Do you have a repeatable way to get clients?

A business shouldn't rely on luck or referrals alone.
Build the system first.

HONEST CHECK-IN

If you answered “no” to any of these...

You don't need to quit.

You need to prepare.

Preparation isn't fear.

It's the competitive advantage most skip.

A successful transition isn't about courage alone.

It's about having a plan.

JOIN THE CONVERSATION

Which question are you still working on?

Drop it in the comments ↓